

SEEK MISSING BRITISH PLANE IN FOREST IN MAINE

PROBABLE TOLL OF DAM FLOOD PLACED AT 402

Engineers Attempt to Fix Cause for Big Dam Bursting

Santa Paula, Cal., March 16—(AP)—With the known death toll standing at 206, several sets of investigators dug deeper into the available evidence today in an effort to unearth the cause of the St. Francis dam disaster.

Although two coroner's juries found yesterday that the victims came to their death by drowning as the result of the breaking of the dam, they did not attempt to fix the blame. From two official investigating sources, however, came reports that the foundation upon which the great structure was built was faulty.

The report of State Engineer Edward Hyatt, Jr., that "had the dam had a sufficiently strong foundation this great tragedy never would have happened," was echoed in a report by Ventura County Engineer Charles Pettit.

And on the heels of these reports, Gov. C. C. Young telephoned B. B. Meek, of the Department of Public Works at Sacramento, to select a group of competent engineers to examine the dam.

U. S. Engineer to Aid Another investigation of the disaster when Elwood Mead, director of the United States Reclamation Service, agreed to head a board of engineers to be selected from the membership of the American Society of Civil Engineers.

Force of iron and steel—steam shovels and tractors—today came to the aid of men in searching the path of the runaway waters for the bodies of its victims.

The call for the machines came yesterday from the weary workers who declared they believed all of the bodies on the surface of the flood area had been found.

The last report showed the bodies of 206 of the dead recovered and the number of missing persons as 196, a total of 402 as the possible death toll.

Seek Bodies on Beach
Searchers today also were ordered to sharpen their watch along the beach, due to the belief that bodies carried to sea would rise on the third day and would be brought to the beach by the tides. Four bodies found at the mouth of the Santa Clara river yesterday strengthened the belief that many carried out to sea.

Inquests into the deaths of the flood victims in Ventura county brought the same verdict—that the victims came to their death by drowning as a result of the breaking of the dam. The coroner's juries were instructed that there as yet was insufficient evidence upon which to inquire into the causes of the disaster.

Ventura County Engineer Pettit issued his statement on conditions at the St. Francis dam after he visited it yesterday, accompanied by the county supervisors.

"It is my opinion that a dam never should have been constructed at this point," he said. "The rock all seems to be largely of decomposed or altered granite which crumbles when subjected to water pressure. I doubt if a firmer bed rock would have been encountered even at lower levels even if it had been sought."

A group of geologists named by the Los Angeles Bureau of Water & Power inspected the site of the broken dam but refused to make public any statement of its findings.

Sheriff Ward Miller, who has been confined to his home for the past two weeks, suffering from tonsillitis, is now able to be at his office a few hours each day.

EX-SHERIFF PHILLIPS AND MRS. EDWARD WITZLEB INJURED LAST EVENING IN AUTOMOBILE MISHAPS

Ex-sheriff Robert R. Phillips sustained a fracture of the right hip last evening when he was struck and knocked down by a car driven by Elwood K. Orrit on West Third street. He was otherwise bruised about the body and removed to his home, 905 West Second street, where he will be confined for several weeks.

Mr. Phillips was on his way home after visiting with a neighbor and was walking west on Third street at about 8:30. He was approaching a driveway when the car driven by Mr. Orrit turned in off the street. The front wheel struck Mr. Phillips on the right leg throwing him to the cement sidewalk with considerable force. It was the force of the fall which resulted in the fracture of the right hip. He was taken in a car to his home where a physician was summoned and reduced the fracture.

Mrs. Witzleb Injured.
A truck in which Mr. and Mrs. Edward Witzleb, 513 East Bradshaw street, and their two children, were returning to their home about 8 o'clock last evening, was struck and overturned, when another machine driven by Ira Rutt of Palmyra struck them. The accident happened at the corner of Fellows street and Ottawa avenue. Mrs. Witzleb was cut about the face and bruised about the body and her four year old son Billy was also cut about the face. Mr. Witzleb and his daughter escaped with only minor bruises. The injured parties were taken to their home where they received medical attention. Both the truck and Rutt car were considerably damaged.

SEVERE EARTH-QUAKES RECORDED THIS MORN

Greek City Only One to Report Actual Tremor, However

Washington, March 16—(AP)—An earthquake of an intensity greater than any ever noted on the seismograph of Georgetown University here was recorded early today by Director Tondor.

The shocks lasted for more than four hours reaching their maximum an hour after midnight. Three extremely powerful shocks were recorded at 1:06, 1:09 and 1:14 A. M.

These shocks disturbed the needles of the instrument six inches.

Director Tondor was not able to say exactly the distance of the shocks from Washington, but believed them to be the same as reported in Greece.

Spokane, Wash., March 16—(AP)—Earthquake shocks which began at 9:18 o'clock last night were still being recorded here at 12:01 o'clock this morning. A. M. Jung, seismologist at Gonzaga University, announced. The heaviest tremors were observed at 9:45 o'clock last night, he said, estimating their center at a point about 4,850 miles distant.

Athens, Greece, March 16—(AP)—Earth tremors caused a number of buildings to collapse at Xylocastro near Corinth today.

The population was panic stricken.

Xylocastro is a maritime village on the southern shore of the Gulf of Corinth about 21 miles east of Corinth. A coastal railway which parallels the shore runs through the village.

British Marathon Runner Drops Out
Seligman, Ariz., March 16—(AP)—The hardships of the 3400 mile cross country marathon, the 13th lap of which was faced today by the one hundred odd entrants remaining, have claimed one of the most interesting of the contestants.

Charles W. Hart, 63 year old British athlete, dropped out yesterday on the 38.3 mile stretch from Peach Springs to Seligman.

Through the first 11 laps of the race Hart finished nearly always near the top beating scores less than half his age to the tape.

With Hart out, Arthur Newton, the 44 year old British runner entered from Rhodesia, South Africa, became the oldest of the race. The holder of the 100 mile English running championship has been setting the pace for the field in many of the laps run to date, and at the start today led the field by more than seven hours in total elapsed time taken to cover the 43.7 miles from Los Angeles. It has taken him 67 hours 10 minutes and 30 seconds.

Newton finished second to Andrew Payne, sturdy limbed Claremore, Okla., youth in yesterday's jog. Payne's time was 5:39:10 while Newton's was 5:47:30.

George Gilroy of Nachusa was in Dixon today.

WINDSTORM HITS NORTH TEXAS AND LOUISIANA TODAY

One Fatality is Reported: Oil Fields' Damage is the Greatest

New Orleans, La., March 16—(AP)—Property damage of $50,000, one life lost and an accommodation train wrecked, was the known toll today of a freakish windstorm that swept the oil fields of northeast Texas and northwest Louisiana yesterday.

The loss from the blow centered largely in the oil areas where an incomplete count showed about thirty derricks smashed. The Caddo, Tullis and other oil fields of Louisiana suffered heavily.

The one fatality reported was E. Chambers, aged resident of Kellyville, Texas, who died of injuries sustained when the roof of his barn, hurled through the air by the twister, landed on him.

Passengers on an accommodation train of the Texarkana-Shreveport branch of the Texas & Pacific Railway probably were saved injury by the fact that the passenger coaches were coupled on to the rear of the train, which was wrecked when three freight cars jumped the track on an undermanned roadbed near Dixie, La.

Shreveport, Vivian and Winnfield, La., escaped the storm with damage consisting chiefly of the crashing of plate glass windows and minor unroofings, while Meridian and Vicksburg reported unroofing of dwellings, uprooting of trees, and damage to automobiles and crops on outlying farms by a forty mile an hour blow and large hail stones.

Two negroes were injured at Vicksburg.

Borah Will Appeal to Party Members
Washington, March 16—(AP)—Pending adoption of a similar course by the Republican National Committee, Senator Borah, Republican, of Idaho, will appeal to members of his party throughout the country for contributions to lift the "obligation of shame" involved in Harry F. Sinclair's donation to the committee in 1923 of $160,000 in Liberty Bonds.

Sinclair's action in trying to get this amount returned to Sinclair was planned, he said, because the Republican committee had not as yet acted on his appeal addressed to William M. Butler, chairman, to give the money back. Butler, who took over the chairmanship after the Sinclair bonds were turned over to former Chairman Will Hays for use in securing the committee deficit from the 1920 campaign, has contended that it was up to those who handled the transaction to decide whether the money should be returned.

Although the Idaho Senator did not criticize any present party managers in his formal statement outlining his course, his step is looked upon as having some political significance in view of the fact that he is considered as a possible presidential candidate this year.

HEENEY SAILS TONIGHT
New York, March 16—(AP)—Tom Heenev, New Zealand heavyweight who came to America without even an overcoat last fall, will sail on the Olympic tonight for a vacation in England after fighting his way into consideration for a title bout with Gene Tunney.

FIGHT AT JOLIET

HULL TESTIMONY BEFORE SENATORS DENIED ON STAND

His Statement of No Democratic Deficit is Denied Today

Chicago, March 16—(AP)—Testimony that the treasurers of both the republican and democratic national committees agreed late in 1923 to refrain from making any report of campaign contributions and expenditures for that year was given today to the Senate Teapot Dome sub-committee.

The witnesses were Irl G. Hopsley and A. V. Leonard, associates of the late Fred W. Upham, the republican treasurer, who declared Upham had told him that Wilbur C. Marsh of Iowa, then in charge of the finances of the democratic national organization, had urged that the national organization of his party had no large deficit at that time and had received no Liberty bonds from Harry F. Sinclair or any others connected either with the lease of the naval oil reserves or the Continental Trading Company, some of the profits of which Harry F. Sinclair turned over to Will H. Hays in November, 1923, to help wipe out the deficit of the republican national committee in advance of the 1924 campaign.

Examined Stewart Account.
Examining the bank account of Robert W. Stewart, Chairman of the Board of the Standard Oil Company of Indiana, the sub-committee today failed to find any unusual deposit in 1922, 1923 or 1924 in Stewart's name.

The senatorial investigators sought from William H. Gilkes, assistant cashier of the Continental & Commercial National bank information as to whether Stewart had made a cash deposit of $500,000 after the Continental Trading Company was organized on November 16, 1921.

Stewart's account in this bank showed no such deposit. Chairman Nye directed Gilkes to find out if any one opened an account in his bank with a deposit of $500,000 after 1921 and also to inform the committee later whether Stewart has a safety deposit box in the Continental & Commercial Bank.

DON ANTRIM OF POLO ATTENDED FETE FOR LINDY

Letter from Santo Domingo, West Indies Described It

Donald Antrim, formerly of Polo, and nephew of Mrs. Kirby Reed of Dixon, who is the assistant manager in the office of the Standard Oil Company in Santo Domingo, West Indies, had the opportunity of attending some of the functions honoring Lindbergh while the famous aviator was there.

In describing the celebration he writes as follows:

"Lindy landed here Saturday, Feb. 4th, the day being his 26th birthday. That evening there was a large flower carnival given in his honor. I was unable to see this, being out of town on business and not returning until Sunday morning."

"Sunday afternoon I attended the reception given by the Receiver General of Customs held on the lawn of his home honoring Lindy's birthday. They had a large cake with fancy icing bearing the date 1902, the year of his birth. Here I had the pleasure of meeting him."

"Sunday night a large ball was given by the government at the Palace. The roof of the reception hall was a solid decoration of American flags. The music was furnished by four orchestras and over 2,000 people were present."

"I was at the field Monday morning to witness Lindy's departure, which was at 10 o'clock. The take off was guarded by a solid line of guards with fixed bayonets."

"I got some very fine snapshots of Lindy and his plane."

Funeral of Michael Callahan this Morn
The funeral of the late Michael J. Callahan, who passed away Monday afternoon, following a stroke of apoplexy, was held this morning. A brief service was conducted at the residence, 303 East Third street, at 9 o'clock and at St. Patrick's Catholic church at 9:30. Officers of Dixon lodge of Elks, of which the deceased was a member, had charge of the services at the grave in Oakwood cemetery where interment was made. The pallbearers were: E. J. Burke of Chicago, John Loftus, Len Whipple, Charles Plein and Edward Lyons of this city and John O'Malley of Freeport. The funeral was largely attended, many friends and relatives from out of town being present.

Repeating to Tilson, Mr. Callahan said he regarded the presence of Cabinet officers on the floor during consideration of bills affecting their department as an effort to influence Congress and established a "bad precedent."

Representative Updike, Republican, Indiana, then called attention that several representatives of pacifist organizations were at that time in the gallery and said Wilbur's presence was preferable to theirs.

The debate of the actual issue produced a wrangle between Laguardia, Republican, New York, and Brannen, Republican, Illinois, over the merits of the building program.

Laguardia said there was no danger of a war within the "life time" of the ships proposed. "Who are we going to fight?" he asked.

"Communism and Bolshevism," answered Brannen, who later attacked the National Council for the Prevention of War and Women's International League, which are opposed to the building program, as "two pacifist organizations with high sounding names."

Glenn Wicher Dead in Los Angeles, Cal.

Henry Year and Fred Kersten of Ashton were here on business yesterday afternoon.

FORLORN HOPE RESTS ON TALE TOLD BY THREE

Big Plane Reported to Have Descended in Woods March 15

Washington, March 16—(AP)—The Canadian Legation today informed the State Department that the Canadian Pacific Railway had reported to Ottawa that a Mr. Dean of the Hollingsworth & Whitby Company of Greenville, Maine, had received a report from their camp number 1 at Roaches Pond on the morning of March 15 that a large airplane had passed Roaches farm at 6 a. m.

The report said the plane was supposed to have descended about 25 miles northeast of Greenville. It was added that this information was later confirmed by a man and his wife who drove into Greenville and said that they had seen a plane that seemed to descend in the forest northeast of Greenville. The Canadian report said that it was understood searching parties had been sent out.

MOTHER DOESN'T KNOW

Cairo, March 16—(AP)—Lady Incheape does not know yet that her daughter, the Honorable Elsie Mackay, is missing on a trans-Atlantic flight in the plane "Endeavour." News of the exploit and its apparently tragic ending is being kept from her because of her health. Lord and Lady Incheape are staying at Helou, near Cairo.

Lord Incheape while waiting hour by hour for news has been obliged to maintain a courageous front before his wife despite his anxiety and distress.

When news leaked out last week that his daughter contemplated taking part in Captain Walter Hinchliffe's flight, Lord Incheape made a most urgent appeal to her by telegram to refrain from such a perilous undertaking. He was profoundly affected when he learned that his daughter had actually started.

New York, March 16—(AP)—All indications today were that the Honorable Elsie Mackay and Captain Walter G. R. Hinchliffe had been lost at sea on their trans-Atlantic flight in the monoplane "Endeavour."

The only optimism was hope that the fliers might have been picked up by a vessel as in the case of Hawker and George Haldeman and Ruth Elder. Some suggestions were that they might have reached Newfoundland and landed in some remote spot, but in previous trans-Atlantic flights similar hopes were in vain.

The latest rumor about the plane was due to somewhat of a mirage. A hotel proprietor's wife at Old Orchard Beach, Me., thought she saw the wreck of an airplane on Stratton Island three miles off shore. The coastguard investigated and concluded that the sun's rays on a farm house window deceived the woman.

No Word Since Tuesday

With no report from the plane since it cleared the tip of Ireland Tuesday morning, save an unconfirmed rumor that it had been sighted by a ship 170 miles off the Irish coast, it was generally believed that search would be futile and that nothing more would be heard of the one-eyed English war ace and the daughter of Lord Incheape.

Radio station WOR of New York City held religious services yesterday for the missing fliers, prayer being offered and the unseen audience being asked to join in the singing of "Lead Kindly Light Amid the Encircling Gloom" and other hymns.

John Gillespie, American representative of Captain Hinchliffe, however, was still hopeful today that the fliers had been forced down near (Continued on page 2)

OLD MASTERS

MIMOSA

A pressed mimosa branch with its golden discs and dry leaves is raised from its resting place between the leaves of an old book. It releases many memories. Mimosa brings a reverie of mellow days in southern France, a resplendent golden bush in the Pyrenees, of myriad florist windows in Switzerland and along the Lake of Geneva. It is an emblem of the Riviera, and with its dusky yellow berries awakens a dream of far-off Februaries abroad. With graceful gifts mimosa was packed. Grass baskets woven by natives of southern France often fore these presents, while mimosa was in its heyday. And beneath the cover of these hand-woven containers, on top of eloquent notes, were narrow branches of mimosa, tokens of friendship and of early spring, more poetry in their silence.

Delicate were the blossoms in the window of flower shops. Little golden balls fluttered, shaking their golden star-dust upon the floor of the window beneath their vases, at imperceptible changes in the mellow air.

Colorful luncheon tables bore tiny arcs of these mellow globes, releasing a pervading perfume, and matching with gold the enameled table tops of robin's egg blue and old ivory, and the pristine colors of the drapery, the pastel background upon which gay plumed parrots swung upon brown circles.

Shy, diffident, they were the emblem of modest reticence. A touch and the flowers would close, like many elusive but sweet things, which vanish at the first hint of boldness.

MENU for the FAMILY

BY SISTER MARY

BREAKFAST—Oranges, cereal cooked with dates, cream codfish balls, crisp toast, milk, coffee.

LUNCHEON—Fish chowder, grape fruit and cabbage salad, fig cookies, cocoa.

Dinner—Braised veal roll, boiled rice with tomato sauce, assorted relishes, prune whip with boiled custard, milk, coffee.

Braised Veal Roll

One slice veal steak cut 1 inch thick, 4 tablespoons minced parsley, 1 tablespoon grated lemon rind, 1 teaspoon mixed dried herbs, 1 teaspoon salt, 1-4 teaspoon pepper, 4 slices bacon, 1 cup diced carrots, 1-2 cup diced turnips, 1-2 cup diced onion, 1-2 cup diced celery, 2 cups boiling water.

Remove the little round bone and trim skin from steak. Mix parsley, lemon rind, powdered herbs, salt and pepper and sprinkle evenly over meat. Roll the meat from the long side keeping the seasoned side in and fasten with skewers or strong wooden toothpicks. Cover the top of the roll with bacon, using wooden toothpicks to hold slices in place. Place vegetables in a greased casserole and put meat on top. Cover and put in a very hot oven for fifteen minutes. Then add boiling water and reduce heat. Cook about an hour, or until tender, in a moderate oven. Remove cover to brown on top. Serve from casserole. Roll roll in slices crosswise to serve.

"The Vikings", Opens At Goodman Theatre

The Kenneth Sawyer Goodman Memorial Theater of Chicago, of which Thomas Wood Stevens is head of the drama department will present "The Vikings," opening March 20th. Many clubs have already engaged tickets for this play. It is expected to make this theater an increasingly strong civic theater.

During the present season the Goodman has presented:

A Dumas melodrama.

An English classic that has stood the test of 200 years.

The world premiere of a new English play.

An Irish drama.

Now, when the world is celebrating the centennial of the great Norwegian dramatist, the Goodman is giving a cycle of Ibsen's plays.

These are presented by a professional company of players of experience and proved ability. As the theater grows all funds are turned back into the theater itself.

Mr. Stevens has many Dixon friends as his is an old Dixon family, and he and his daughter are well known here.

Club women of Chicago and vicinity are proud of the Art Institute and the Symphony Orchestra. They have a right to be, for their appreciation of art and music, and their continued support, have helped to build these civic enterprises.

What Chicago has done in the fields of art and music can be done in the field of the drama.

The basic idea of the Goodman Theater is "to restore the old visions and to win the new."

Just as the Art Institute in its passing exhibitions gives the public an opportunity to see paintings of many periods and countries, the Goodman theater offers an opportunity to study and enjoy plays of many periods and countries—plays which could not in the usual run of theatrical entertainment be seen.

To accomplish all this Cloyd Head, the manager says:

"We shall need the support of every woman's club. Many clubs are already giving this support, but we need all. How can your club help you ask? You can help by including a Goodman Theater party on your club program, but don't wait until next year's programs—organize a theater party for 'The Vikings,' the most elaborate production the Goodman Theater has yet made."

Single admission $1.50. Groups of 25 or more, $1.00.

CLOUDING ISSUES.

The obscure cuttlefish has never been given his just reward by the people of this great republic.

The cuttlefish, you know, is a deep-sea creature whose armament includes a bag of ink. When the cuttlefish gets in a jam he lets fly with a cloud of ink, thereby befogging the issue and dodging the teeth, beak or what not of his adversary.

For many years this creature has served as a model for many of our best citizens. Cuttlefish tactics have been refined and perfected in public life until it would seem only simple justice to build a memorial to this deep-sea denizen.

Here is a case in point.

During the last couple of weeks, a committee of United States senators has been investigating conditions in the Pennsylvania soft coal fields. The senators have uncovered some rather startling facts. They have found out that women and children are being thrown out of homes, destitute, in the middle of winter. They have discovered that a judge has issued an injunction which even forbids strikers from singing hymns on church property. They have heard tales of armed guards who have no compunctions about using guns on defenseless citizens. All in all, they have helped bring to light rather a sorry mess.

And now the cuttlefish tactics have begun. We are being told that these senators are "radicals."

It is undoubtedly true that the mine owners are not the black villains that some union leaders would have us think. It is undoubtedly true that the entire industry is sick, and that the troubles incident to the present strike are only surface indications of ills that lie deep down, calling for something more far-reaching than any mere temporary adjustment of rival wage demands.

But the cry of "radicals" is an ill omen. The word "radical" is a bad word. It is a cuttlefish's cloud of ink. It can be depended on to befog almost any issue. Yell it often enough and loudly enough and you will soon have the public discounting everything your adversary says.

The Pennsylvania situation demands the attention of the best minds of the country. Something must be done to remedy matters, for the sake of mine owners' dividends if for no other reasons. Shouting "radicals" at the senators who are investigating things is a mighty poor way of helping. Such tactics will only defer the settlement that must be had sooner or later.

And remember—the first senator to demand the investigation that is now being made was that bolshevistic agent of Moscow, Senator David A. Reed of Pennsylvania, friend and political associate of Comrade Andrew Mellon.

CUBA WILL WANT AUTOS.

Cuba is hard at work building roads, and in two years will have completed an extensive central highway system, according to a report from the U. S. Department of Commerce.

This will make Cuba a much better market for American automobiles and will help stimulate production in American factories.

Our prosperity has a very complicated base. It seems odd, to think that such things as roads in Cuba could affect workers in Detroit and Flint. But that is the way it is. Truly, modern business is a mosaic, and many strange pieces are fitted into the pattern.

DID DIAZ DIE POOR?

Armando Diaz, commander of Italy's armies in the World War, died poor, according to United Press dispatches. His only property consisted of a collection of swords, given him by admirers, and a house given him by the city of Naples.

But it is a mistake to assume that he left no estate. He left a mighty name—a name that for generations will mean much to every Italian. And that can be a far greater heritage than any collection of stocks and bonds.

A New York newspaper advertises that it is about to print the truth about Russia. That is, this week's truth about Russia.

Ford airplanes for the same price as flivvers are forecast. Is that a threat or a promise?

A couple of Americans were imprisoned in Mexico for highway robbery. They should have tried to prove they were Mexican citizens.

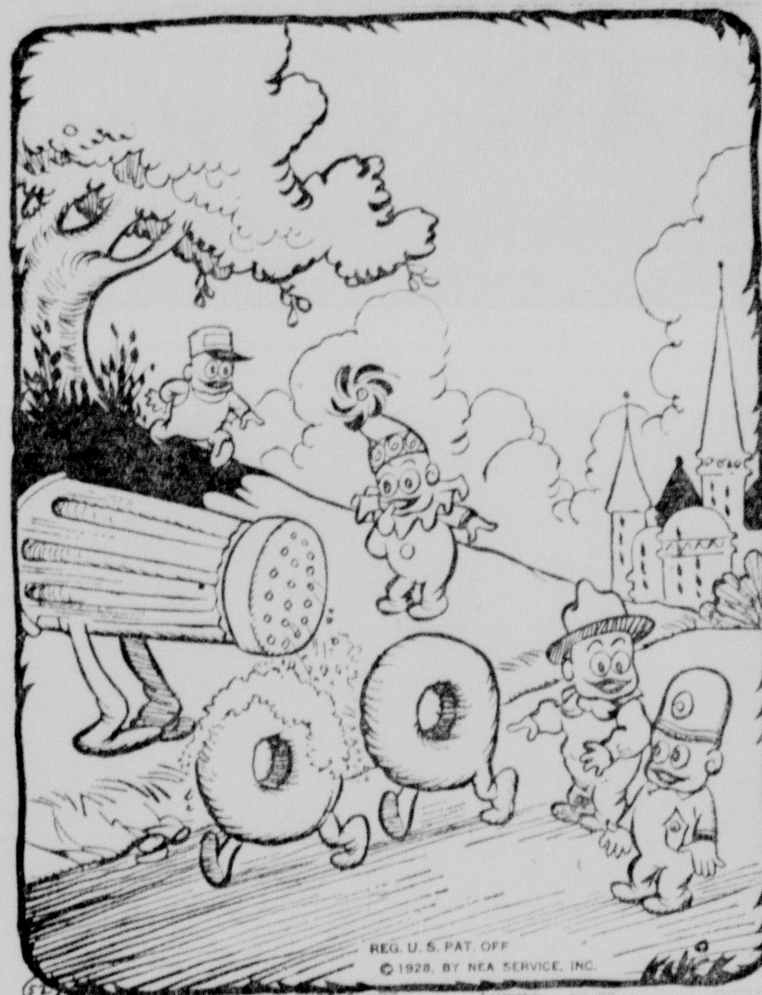

A man in New York has designed a reversible vest. Only another way of dividing the gravy.

The younger intellectuals are now questioning the existence of time. Seems to us they are only trying to kill time.

While Congress is trying to do something about the flood situation, wouldn't it be a good idea to see about some of this watered stock?

No wonder the world is crooked; even some of the stars are fixed.

As Clowny rolled the doughnut, a race? "Hurrah!" exclaimed wee Carry. "That's exactly what we'll do. We'll race to yonder tree, and then turn round and race back here again. 'Twill be a lot of fun, I'm sure, and I will win it, too."

The Tinymites lined up just so, and then the baker shouted, "Go!" And off the whole bunch scampered, while their shrill shouts filled the air. It really was a lot of fun and Scooty was the one who won. When all of them returned they found a sugar shaker there.

"Hello, there, bunch," the shaker said. "Nice sugar comes out of my head. If you will roll the doughnuts by, I'll make them nice and white." 'Twas easily done, the Tines found, and sugar sprinkled all around. When each doughnut was covered it was quite a pretty sight.

(The Tinymites meet the jelly man in the next story.)

BY RUTH DEWEY GROVES

Dear Mom:

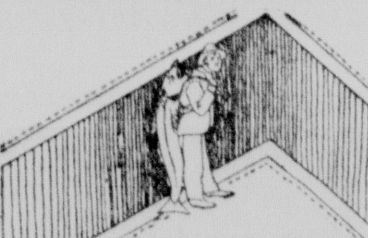

No, I wasn't hurt because a few loving friends panned me, but the injustice of blaming me for what Norman does gives me the rankles. The rankles, in case you don't know, are ingrown beebees-jebbies.

But I tried following your advice and told Billy he mustn't see me and I mustn't see him any more but gee, Mom, he took it like a dose of castor oil. I hadn't the heart to stick to it. Like taking candy out of a baby's mouth. So I've decided to be a Good Influence to him. I was tempted to use that old line you girls used to pull about being a sister to the poor wretch but remembering some of the brother stuff Frank has handed me in the past I switched to the G. I. Instead. I'm sure it will be more interesting for both of us.

In a weak moment I told Alan about Billy and that I wanted to ask him over, thinking maybe if he saw me in a domestic atmosphere Alan would seem more like a real impediment to him. Working on the old theory that while there's no chance, there's no hope. But Alan wouldn't stand for it. Said he'd push the young purp's face in if I had him hanging around the house.

Now why is it, I wonder, that men treat a boy's love like a joke? I'll bet Alan went through the same stage when he was Billy's age. He might have a little compassion because it's a real case with Billy. Breaks out like a rash every time we're together. It makes my heart ache, he's so nice about it.

SCOTT'S EMULSION

A THOUGHT FOR TODAY

FELLOWSHIP OF PRAYER

Life, a Sacred Trust. (Read Matt. 25:14-30.) Memory Verse: To whom much is given, of him shall much be required. (Luke 12:48).

The doctrine of noblesse oblige is grounded in the teaching of Jesus. A man's life is not given to him in fee simple. He is a steward. Paul spoke of himself as a slave of God. God owned him. The sense of obligation, springing out of possession, is a distinctly Christian type of thought. It adds worth to one's life and to one's belongings. The greater our gifts, the greater are our obligations; the greater our attainments the greater our responsibilities. The Christian can neither be vain nor scornful. One of the most distinguished illustrations of what this motive can do is Dr. Albert Schweitzer, in the heart of Africa. A distinguished author, scholar, physician and musician, he has built himself a hospital in the dark continent and there lives that he may minister to those who lack all that he possesses.

Prayer: Send forth a mighty call, O Lord, unto thy servants to live and preach thy word, and multiply the number of those who labor in the gospel, granting unto them a heart of love, sincerity of speech and the power of thy holy spirit, that they may be able to persuade men to turn to thee. Amen.

Walk while ye have the light, lest darkness come upon you.—John 12:35.

Light, seeking light, doth light of light beguile; so, ere you find where light in darkness lies, your light grows dark by losing of your eyes.—Shakespeare.

Historic Boston House Jeopardized

Boston.—(AP)—The fate of the old house where General Washington and General John Thomas planned the occupation of Dorchester Heights 152 years ago hangs in the balance as Boston prepares to celebrate Evacuation Day on March 17. A great modern school building is to be erected on the site of the two-century-old house.

The house stands in Eliot Square, Roxbury. Even when it was built in 1714 its site was historic ground, for John Eliot, "apostle to the Indians," had labored there.

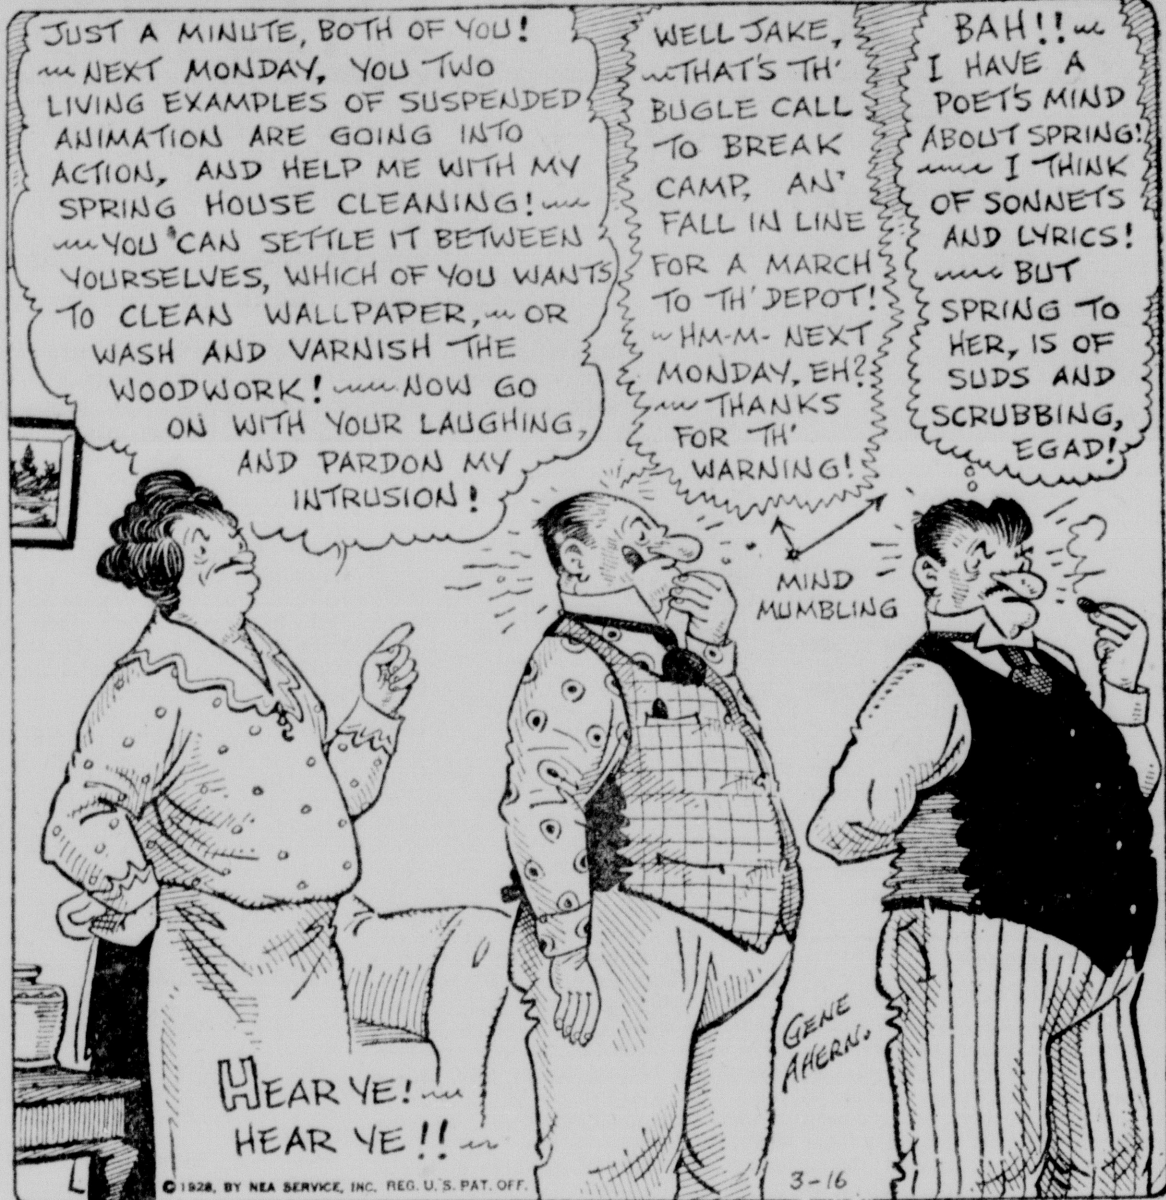

It was already old in 1775 when the Battle of Bunker Hill was fought. From its dormer windows watchers saw the ebb and flow of battle that June 17, on Breed's Hill miles away. They saw the waves of British forces sweep up the hillside and finally overwhelm the doctory little band that had tried to seize the hilltop and force the British from the city.

Less than a year later, as a result of plans which were prepared in part in this ancient house, the British awoke one morning to see cannon frowning down upon them from Dorchester Heights. Separated from the city by a sweep of water that made attack difficult, the British forces were faced with General Washington's threat to bombard the city and sent it tumbling about their ears. So on March 17 the British evacuated and sailed away for Halifax, N. S., with about 1,000 Tory sympathizers. Thus the occupation of Dorchester Heights accomplished what the Battle of Bunker Hill failed to achieve.

Each year the city celebrates the anniversary of the evacuation of the city with a parade of thousands of military men and civilians. This year 6,000 soldiers, sailors, marines and civilians will march in memory of the event.

A movement now is under way to have the Dilwallow house preserved and the school house commission, according to its chairman, Francis E. Slattery, will lend its cooperation.

OUR BOARDING HOUSE

Other bodies that have taken an interest in the movement to have the old building saved are the Roxbury Historical Society and the New England Society for the Preservation of Antiques.

To Have Music Hall

Bloomington, Ill.—(AP)—Music students at Illinois Wesleyan university no longer face the prospect of "freezing" through their classes on winter days.

The three old dwelling houses, that for years have housed the university's students are on their last legs. In their place will rise a $150,000 music hall, more than half paid for already.

Unsolicted, the Theodore Presser Foundation of Philadelphia, has offered to the university $75,000 for the construction of a new hall when the school has accumulated a like fund. Readily accepting the offer, university officials have gone vigorously to work to secure the necessary contributions from students, alumni and music lovers.

Wesleyan's old music hall, in the eyes of one of its faculty members, Mattie F. Simonds, is fairly comparable to the turreted and arched piles of stone that formed the great castles of medieval days, when the lord and lady sat before a roaring fire, freezing on one side and roasting on the other.

"The present school," Miss Simonds said "is contained in three old dwelling houses. It is difficult to hear in them, electricity must be constantly used, no space for social affairs is available, rooms are drafty and not soundproof, and it is greatly crowded.

Plans for the new building provide for a structure of Eudor Gothic and Renaissance architecture, to conform with surrounding buildings. It will be constructed of red brick and limestone trim, and a maze of windows will provide adequate lighting. Floors will be of cork tile, and aided by special, soundproof rooms will be possible. Classrooms, studios, practice rooms, recital halls, reception rooms, and business offices will be built into the imposing structure. The entire east wing of the building will be used for an auditorium.

Thousand Beacons Illuminate Pacific

San Francisco.—(AP)—The Pacific ocean may presently resemble something like a great white way.

The department of commerce at Washington recently listed the total of lighthouses and beacons established along its borders and on its shoals in aid of navigation and found that they exceeded 1,000. In 1900 the lighthouse bureau had but 188 Pacific lights, while the exact total for 1928 is 1,086, and in addition there are 121 fog signals and radio beacons at work in the Pacific area.

The numerous lights of today are marked by ever increasing brilliancy. The biggest and best in Pacific waters is a million-candle power affair, located at Point Sur in California. Flashing every quarter second during the dark hours. The rays are visible 100 miles, a range only exceeded by the radio beacons, with warnings which can be picked up over a 200-mile radius.

The Pacific light lists, which enumerates all the navigational aids, is a moderate sized book for 1928, setting down and describing each beacon, buoy and signal between Guam and Alaska and Yap and the Golden Gate. The 1928 edition accounts for hundreds of whistles, sirens, horns and chimes, which with the lights serve to warn mariners of channels and dangers.

GIRL ALONE

ANNE AUSTIN AUTHOR OF "SAINT AND SINNER"

CHAPTER I

THE long, bare room had never been graced by a picture or a curtain. Its only furniture was 20 narrow iron cots.

Four girls were scrubbing the warped, wide-planked floor, three of them pitifully young for the hard work, the baby of them being only six, the oldest nine. The fourth, who directed their labors, rising from her knees sometimes to help one of her small crew, was just turned 16, but she looked, in her short, skimpy dress of faded blue and white checked gingham, not more than 12 or 13.

"Sally," the six-year-old called out in a coaxing whine, as she sloshed a dirty rag up and down in a pail of soapy water, "play-act for us, won't you, Sally?" "Tend like you're a queen and I'm your little girl. I'd be a princess, wouldn't I, Sally?"

The child sat back on her thin little haunches, one small hand plucking at the skimpy skirt of her own faded blue and white gingham, an exact replica, except for size, of the frocks worn by the three other scrubbers. "I'll tend like I've got on a white satin dress, Sally."

Sally Ford lifted a strand of fine black hair that had escaped from the tight, thick braid that hung down her narrow back, tucked it behind a well-shaped ear, and smiled fondly upon the tiny pleader. It was a miracle-working smile. Before the miracle, that small, pale face had looked like that of a serious little old woman, the brows knotted, the mouth tight in a frown of concentration.

But when she smiled she became a pretty girl. Her blue eyes, that had looked almost as faded as her dress, darkened and gleamed like a pair of perfectly matched sapphires. Delicate, wing-like eyebrows, even blacker than her hair, lost their sullenness, assumed a lovely, provocative arch. Her white cheeks gleamed. Her little pale mouth, unpuckered of its frown, bloomed suddenly, like a tea rose opening. Even, pointed, narrow teeth, to fit the narrowness of her delicate, childish jaw, flashed into that smile, completely destroying the picture of a rather sad little old woman which she might have posed for before.

"All right, Betty!" Sally cried, jumping to her feet. "But all of you will have to work twice as hard after I've played-act for you, or Stone-Face will skin us alive."

Her smile was reflected in the three oldish little faces of the children squatting on the floor. The rags with which they had been wiping up surplus water after Sally's vigorous scrubbing were abandoned, and the three of them, moving in unison like mindless sheep, clustered close to Sally, following her with adoring eyes as she switched a sheet off one of the cots. "This is my ermine robe," she declared. "Thelma, run and shut the door." Now, this is my royal crown," she added, seizing her long, thick braid of black hair. Her nimble, thin fingers searched for and found three crimped wire hairpins which she secreted in the meshes of the plait. In a trice her small head was crowned with its own magnificent glory, the braid wound coronet fashion over her ears and low upon her broad, white forehead.

"Say 'A royal queen am I,' six-year-old Betty shrieked, clasping her hands in ecstasy. "And don't forget to make up a verse about me, Sally! I'm a princess! I've got on white satin and little red shoes, ain't I, Sally?"

Sally was marching grandly up and down the barrack-like dormitory, holding Betty's hand, the train of her "ermine robe" upheld by the two other little girls in faded gingham, and her dramatically deepened voice was chanting "verses" which she had composed on other such occasions and to which she was now adding, when the door was thrown open and a booming voice rang out:

"Sally Ford! What in the world does this mean? On a Saturday morning!"

The two little "pages" dropped the "ermine robe"; the little "princess" shrank closer against the "queen," and all four, Sally's voice leading the chorus, chanted in a monotonous sing-song: "Good morning, Mrs. Stone. We hope you are well." It was the good morning salutation which, at the matron's orders, invariably greeted her as she made her morning rounds of the state orphanage asylum.

"Good morning, children," Mrs. Stone, the head matron of the asylum, answered severely but automatically. She never spoke except severely, unless it happened that a trustee or a visitor was accompanying her.

"As a punishment for playing at your work you will spend an hour of your Saturday afternoon play-to be pleasant and conversational, for she was fond of Sally, in her own way. "She has yellow curls, though I suspect her mother, who has just died and who was a stock company actress, used peroxide on it. But still it's yellow and it's curly, and we have at least a hundred applications on file for little girls with golden curly hair."

"Thelma," she whirled severely upon the eight-year-old child, "what's this in your bed?" Her broad, heavy palm, sweeping expertly down the sheet-covered iron cot, had encountered something, a piece of broken blue bottle.

"It—It's mine," Thelma quivered, her tongue flicking upward to catch the first salty tear. "I traded my broken doll for it. I look through it and it makes everything look pretty and blue," she explained desperately, in the institutional whine. "Oh, please let me keep it, Mrs. Stone!"

But the matron had tossed the bit of blue glass through the nearest window. "You'd cut yourself on it, Thelma," she justified herself in her stern voice. "I'll see if I can find another doll for you in the next box of presents that comes in. Now, don't cry like a baby. You're a great big girl. It was just a piece of broken old bottle. Well, Sally, you take charge of the new little girl. Make her feel at home. Give her a bath with that insect soap, and make a bundle of her clothes and take them down to Miss Ford."

She lifted her long, starched skirt as she stepped over one of the scrubber's puddles of water, then moved majestically through the door.

Clara, the nine-year-old orphan, stuck out her tongue as the white skirt swished through the door, then turned upon Sally, her little face sharp and ugly with hatred. "Mean old thing! Always 'buttin' in! Can't let us have no fun at all! Some other kid'll find Thelma's sapphire and keep it often her—"

"It isn't a sapphire," Sally said dully, her brush beginning to describe new semi-circles on the pine floor. "It's like she said—just a piece of broken old bottle. And she said she'd try to find you a doll, Thelma."

"You said it was a sapphire, Sally. You said it was worth millions and millions of dollars. It was a sapphire, long as you said it was, Sally!" Thelma sobbed, as grieved for the loss of illusion as for the loss of her treasure.

"I reckon I'm plumb foolish to go on play-acting all the time," Sally Ford said dully.

The three little girls and the 16-year-old "mother" of them scrubbed in silence for several minutes, doggedly hurrying to make up for lost time. Then Thelma, who could never nurse grief or anger, spoke cheerfully:

"Now, Sally," continued the matron, moving down the long line of iron cots and inspecting them with a sharp eye, "don't let this happen again. I depend on you big girls to help me discipline the little ones. And by the way Sally, there's a new little girl. She just came this morning, and I'm having Miss Pond send her up to you. You have an empty bed in this dormitory, I believe."

"Yes, Mrs. Stone," Sally answered meekly, her face that of a little old woman again; but her hands trembled as she gathered up the sheet which for a magic 10 minutes had been an ermine robe.

"Christine's bed." There was nothing in her voice to indicate that she had loved Christine more than any child she had ever had charge of.

"I suppose this new child will be snapped up soon," Mrs. Stone continued, her severe voice striving

NEW MANAGER OF PHILLIES MAKES NUMBER CHANGES

Two Infielders are Converted to Outer Gardeners

BY BRIAN BELL (Associated Press Sports Writer)

Winter Haven, Fla., March 16—(AP)—Barney Shotten, a great major league outfielder in his day, went to the minors to learn the trade of manager, and now has returned to the Philadelphia Nationals to practice some of his lessons in the big time.

Manager Shotten found no rule in the minors to require players to play infield positions because they were infielders, so the first thing he did as the Phillies unwound themselves from a winter's rest was to convert two infielders into outfielders.

Russell Wrightstone, who has played every infield position for the Phillies with only fair success, will spend this summer in the outfield. He can hit and throw and has shown promise of developing into a good fly chaser.

The other player who thought he was an infielder is Bill Detrick, University of Virginia shortstop and a full fledged lawyer entitled to practice before the bar of the Old Dominion. Detrick's great arm attracted Barney's attention early in the game.

Fred Leach will not be molested in center field and Cy Williams with his 30 home runs of last year, and Al Nixon who can field and hit, will be kept around as may be Charlie Spalding and Danny Southern.

New Infielders

The infield will have two new faces. Bill Kelley, almost as big as Cincinnati's first base Kelly, has come from Newark to play first base, and Arthur Whitney, a New Orleans star last year, has an edge on Barney Friberg at third base.

Tresco Thompson and Helme Sand have been reelected at second and short.

There is a dearth of infield substitutes, if Wrightstone and Detrick remain permanently among the outfielders, but the management is crossing that bridge when it comes to it.

The Phillies could use another catcher and several pitchers. Captain Jimmy Wilson will catch most of the games and Harry O'Donnell is available from last year. John Schulte, with the Cardinals last year has not yet shown whether he will like Philadelphia in the summer.

The club which finished far in the rear in the 1927 race suffered a serious blow before active preparations for 1928 were started, Frank Ulrich, able pitcher was stricken by pneumonia. He is in a Baltimore hospital.

Pitchers Better

The club seems to have strengthened its pitching staff by winter trades bringing Jimmy Ring from St. Louis back to Philadelphia where he has toiled before and Bob Mc-Graw, also a Cardinal pitcher in season. Clarence Mitchell, aging but still active spitballer from the post side; Herb Pruett, another left hander; Alex Ferguson and Claude W. Loughby of last year's staff are at the posts again. Lester Sweetland, native Floridian, who has returned to the club after an excursion to the minors, may be another left hand addition to the staff. Among the new pitchers who have shown impressive spring form are Ray Bengue, from Waco in the Texas League, Jim Green of the Portsmouth Virgin League club and Russell Miller, who did great work for Syracuse under his present boss.

Leaders Threatened

Kansas City, March 16—(AP)—Markings of leaders in the America Bowling Congress tournament, here were threatened today with the arrival of eastern stars including B. Spillola of New York, all-event champion.

Two men teams were assigned exclusive use of the alleys throughout the morning and afternoon. The squads included entries from Buffalo, N. Y., Milwaukee, Chicago, St. Louis, Newark, N. J., and Port Dodge, Iowa.

Fourteen five-men teams from New York were marked up in the first squad to roll tonight, starting at 7 p. m. In addition to Spillola, who holds the all-event record of 2,011, Mort Lindsey, ranked among the first ten bowlers of the country, will show with New York City entries.

Leaders in all four events retained their places yesterday.

Nine Conferences in Illini Relay

Urbana, Ill., March 16—(AP)—Champions of nine collegiate athletic conferences are represented in the field of 850 track men from 80 universities gathering here for the eleventh annual Illinois indoor relay carnival tomorrow.

Four university relays, three college relays, one high school relay, ten special events and the all-around championship constitute this year's program. The main meet, including the university relays, will be held tomorrow night, with the college and high school events in the afternoon. Twelve athletes have been entered in the all-around championship.

Pave world's records have been bettered in past carnivals, and the new marks set us a week ago in the Big Ten and Missouri Valley annual meets indicate the speed of this year's pack of runners.

Elder of Notre Dame, Grady of Kansas and Simpson of Ohio are the dash men who have threatened the short distance marks. Cuhel of Iowa, Rodgers of Illinois and Kane of Ohio Wesleyan are the outstanding hurdlers entered.

The one mile and four mile university relays have drawn the fastest fields of any event. Rice Institute, Houston, Texas, Ohio State, Notre Dame, Illinois and Wisconsin all are represented by classy runners in the four mile race. Iowa appears to have a slight edge on Indiana and Illinois for the one mile relay. Iowa has won this race five times in the last six years. Georgetown holds the one-mile mark at 3:20.4-5 made in 1925, and Illinois the four-mile mark at 18:13.3-5 made last year.

Signs Heavyweights

Chicago, March 16—(AP)—Plans for a heavyweight elimination tournament of his own were launched today by Promoter Jim Mullen with the signing of Roberto Roberti, Italian heavyweight, with Otto Von Porat, Norwegian, for ten rounds March 23. The next opponent of Gene Tunney must come from the younger and comparatively unknown heavies, Mullen contends, since the eastern eliminations have failed to produce a heavyweight of sufficient merit or personality to deserve a match with the champion.

Roberti is credited with thirteen knockouts in his last nineteen matches. Von Porat has been bowling over heavyweights here all winter.

Hoppe Wins Tourney

New York, March 16—(AP)—Willie Hoppe, who led the world's billiards for many years, now holds a place of eminence among the three cushion experts, having clinched first place in the American Three Cushion League's first tournament.

The former billiard king sewed up his first three cushion title by defeating Augie Kleckhefer, 50 to 35 in 58 innings last night, and with only three games left to be played is certain of the peak even though he drops all these engagements.

GO TO CHURCH SUNDAY--Dixon Churches Make Extensive Plans for Sunday

During the first four days of this week the church of Dixon have been engaged in a big undertaking. In order that the churches might more effectively do this work for which they are organized, it was decided to conduct a city-wide survey this week in order to ascertain just where the residents of the city stand in regard to their church loyalty and affiliation. This task is now practically completed, thanks to a corps of 200 workers. As a fitting windup for the religious survey, a Go-To-Church Sunday has been planned and every church in the city will make special arrangements to welcome the worshippers. The churches of Dixon are among the oldest institutions in the community, some of them having done effective work for over ninety years. Every citizen should feel proud of the record of the church and should pledge renewed allegiance and loyalty to the city of Dixon. Attendance at the church of your preference is urged.

First Methodist

The Methodist church has been in Dixon long enough now to feel quite at home here.

The first sermon to Dixon people was delivered in the fall of 1834 by a M. E. preacher by the name of Segg. Mr. Segg rode a circuit extending from Apple River to Prophetstown. He endeavored to make three rounds every four weeks. He broke under the strain, however, and died in the fall of 1835. Barton Cartwright, related, I think, to the renowned Peter Cartwright, was presiding elder.

In 1836, Rev. James McKean of Elkhorn Grove preached here. Dixon was then a settlement of four log cabins, one frame dwelling and a blacksmith shop, with three or four houses building.

Caleb Talmadge and his wife, Amanda Chase Talmadge, arrived at Dixon's Ferry that year, the first of the Methodist settlers. She was a relative of Bishop Carleton Chase of the Episcopal church, arch of Salmon P. Chase of President Lincoln's cabinet.

In 1837 there was formed a Methodist class, first religious organization in the settlement. It had seven members—Mr. and Mrs. S. M. Bowman; Mr. and Mrs. John Richards; Mr. and Mrs. Talmadge, and Mrs. Maria McClure. Mr. Bowman was a cousin of Bishop Thomas Bowman as was also Mrs. Joseph Crawford, a later member of the church.

The class held its meetings in the upstairs room of the Bowman store, at the southwest corner of Galena avenue and River street, present site of the Hofmann tin shop.

The first quarterly meeting was held that summer at the Talmadge tavern, northwest corner of First street and Peoria avenue. A Sunday school was organized this same season with Mr. Bowman as superintendent. This Mr. Bowman was an able, outstanding man. He served for nearly twenty years in the church, moving to St. Louis, where he took up the practice of law. In the Civil War he was on the staff of General Sherman, and later wrote an authorized biography of the general.

In 1837 the first school house was erected. The next few years this served as the preaching place for both Methodists and Baptists, these two first churches of Dixon ministering to their congregations on alternate Sabbath days.

About 1840 Dr. Luke Hitchcock, Methodist landmark of early days, was appointed preacher here, and he remained a guiding spirit for many years.

That was the year the first court house was erected, being built of brick, burned on the site of the present Presbyterian church. An oversupply of the brick was burned.

Of this brick, in 1842-43, the Methodists built themselves a house of worship. It was the first church edifice in Dixon, and cost them $4,000. It faced the court house from the north. Remodeled into a residence, it is today owned and occupied by Dr. Marion L. White.

The trustees at the time were James P. Dixon, Chas. Edson, Rev. F. Ayers, LeGrand Wyncoop, Thos. McCabe, J. Brierton and S. M. Bowman.

At Trustees' meeting in 1854, Brother Talmadge reported progress in the construction of a new parsonage and Brother Wyncoop reported plans for the new church, to be erected on our present site, Peoria and Second street. It was 1857 when this church was dedicated, and it had cost the congregation $15,000.

In 1870 the church acquired its Camp Ground at Franklin Grove, for camp meetings have been a historic feature in the development of Methodism.

With the coming of the College, in 1881, the churches of Dixon took on phenomenal growth—particularly was this true of the Methodist church. In 1889, Ira W. Lewis offered the motion, "Resolved, that it is the sense of this society that we need more room and better accommodations, and should proceed to build a new church or to remodel and enlarge the present building". His motion carried, and there was launched a great work.

Four years later the present building on Third street was finished and dedicated. It had cost $35,000. It is still a worthy building, and stands a monument to the sacrifices of the congregation in building it. There were giants in those days.

Convinced that the most effective way of acquiring members has been to "raise" them, our church, for the last score or more of years, has emphasized its Sunday school. One peculiar fruit of this, it would seem, is the unusual fact that it has in its large school as many adults as children.

It has just now completed, at the cost of $1000, additional rooms for housing the primary department,

Now, at 90 years of age, the Methodist church of Dixon feels vigorous and young. It covets the welfare of Dixon, and is most happy to be a co-worker in all good things with its fellow churches.

Next Sunday is "Go To Church" Sunday for all of the churches of Dixon and our own members are invited to give the largest response possible to this call. Every church member in Dixon is urged to be at his respective church at the hours of worship next Sunday.

The subject of the pastor's sermon in the morning will be "A Revealing Companionship." The chorus choir will sing two numbers, which will be "The Ninety and Nine" by Protheroe and "No Shadows Yonder" by Gaul. In the evening the pastor will use for his subject "The Salt of the Earth" and a mixed quartet will sing.

The Epworth League at six-thirty will be led by Miss Alberta Peterson, and Miss Ruth Leydig will sing a soprano solo.

The Primary Department of the Church School will occupy the new room built especially for its use next Sunday. The room originally used by this and the Junior departments will be occupied by the Juniors alone.

The spirit of the Lenten season is being stressed in all of the services of our church, but special emphasis is laid upon the spirit of the season in the mid-week service of prayer. The subject for next Wednesday evening will be "The Bitter Cup."

The meeting of the Men's club for next Monday evening will be of especial interest. The play "The Rummage Sale" given by the women of the Ladies Aid Society recently will be repeated at the Men's Club meeting next Monday night for the benefit of the men. The price for the supper will include the play. Because of the large interest in this meeting it has been made an open meeting and the women as well as the men are invited. It is urged therefore that supper reservations be made as soon as possible. The supper will be served by the men.

The service group meeting of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society will be held Thursday of next week in the Methodist church at Ashton, beginning at 10 o'clock. The speakers will be Mrs. E. G. Van Sant of Sterling and Rev. E. C. Lumsden, the district superintendent. The Ladies Aid Society will hold its regular monthly business meeting next Friday afternoon at 2:30.

Congregational

The people of West Dixon and the officers of the Home Missionary Society of Illinois realizing the need of Christian work in that part of the city erected a tent on Van Buren avenue in June 1901 and invited Rev. Messrs. J. G. Brooks and K. R. Stetson to conduct services. The response was so hearty that in August a church organization was effected. Rev. Brooks was requested to become its first pastor. Owing to his untiring work it was possible to erect a house of worship which was dedicated March 6, 1902. A few years later a parsonage was added. The work has continued under his direction and that of nine other pastors for twenty-seven years. The Sunday School with its average attendance of nearly 100 being especially important. While the constantly changing population prevents the church from becoming large it is felt it is most necessary in that part of the city.

Sunday, March 18, has been set apart as "Go to Church Sunday." How strange that we should find it necessary to issue this command. The church has stood through all time as the institution which disciplines future generations for highest citizenship.

Wherever we see the church towering heavenward we find consecrated workers—unselfish men and women giving time, talent and money to build noble manhood. No family head seeks a home in a churchless town. He wants his family to reap the benefits which accrue through church affiliation.

To accomplish any worthy work demands action—work. Are we going to be so selfish and indifferent that we shall permit the other fellow to discipline our children in religion, pay our share of church maintenance and then reap the benefits a Christian Community makes possible?

No, Dixon people are too proud to be remiss in duty, and too anxious to serve their God to neglect church going.

We'll be there Sunday and every Sunday. Bring in the chairs! J. Franklin Young, Minister.

St. Luke's Episcopal

Peoria Avenue & Third Street.
Rev. Richard C. Talbot, Jr., B. D. Rector

Brief Historical Sketch
Ninety-two years ago—in 1836—Saint Luke's Church was organized by the Reverend James DePuy, who served as a "missionary at large" on the Rock River. He was sent into their territory from New York. The earliest official supervision of the work was by Bishop Chase. It was Bishop Chase who consecrated the Grand Detour Church, which was the earliest organized parish of the Episcopal Church in the district.

Early accounts of the work at Saint Luke's tell of the Indian tribes and their customs, and speak of the Rock River as the "Nene-men-shenega" (Rocky-channel river).

The first church building was a small, frame structure, which is still standing and is used as a dwelling. The present stone building, of Gothic architecture, was built in 1871 and consecrated in 1872 by Bishop Whitehouse of the Diocese of Illinois.

For a number of years the work of the Church was maintained with great difficulty. Within the last ten years, however, great strides ahead have been made, and the Parish is now very firmly established. Saint Luke's numbers among her former Rectors several men who have become prominent in church affairs, and among her lay people many who have played important roles in the affairs of the community.

Before Christmas of last year a number of gifts and memorials were placed in the Church, and they have done much to add to its beauty and reverential atmosphere. These gifts and memorials include the Altar and Reredos given by Mrs. Jane Lyon Reynolds in memory of Pauline Lyon Martin; four candle-sticks for the Altar given by Mrs. Charles E. Chandler in memory of her husband; a Credence Table given by Mr. Geo. W. Hawley and Mr. Robt. W. Sterling; paneling around the walls of the Sanctuary given by Saint Agnes' Guild; and a Communion rail placed in the Church in memory of May Brookner Cupp.

The Organizations of the Parish at the present time are the Church School, the Altar Guild, the Choir (Mr. Clinton Fahney Organist and Choirmaster), a branch of the Women's Auxiliary, Saint Ann's Guild, Saint Agnes' Guild (celebrating its fiftieth anniversary this year) and Troop 60 of the Boy Scouts of America.

There follows a list of the Officers of the Parish for the current year: Rector—Rev. Richard Colgate Talbot, Jr., who took up his duties January fifteenth of this year; Senior Warden—Mr. Robert W. Sterling; Junior Warden—Mr. Theodore W. Fuller; Clerk of the Vestry—Mr. W. D. Hart; Treasurer—Mr. Lester Wilhelm; Vestrymen—Dr. R. L.

Baird, Mr. D. G. Harvey, Mr. Theodore J. Miller, Jr., Dr. Warren G. Murray, Mr. Lloyd E. Spencer, Mr. Gordon Utley; Councilwomen—Mrs. Esther Davies, Mrs. J. S. Emerson, Mrs. G. W. Hawley, Mrs. E. N. Howell, Mrs. Fred King, Mrs. Joseph McCleary, Miss Mary A. Scanlon, Mrs. Lloyd E. Spencer.

First Baptist

The First Baptist Church of Dixon originated at a meeting held at Buffalo Grove on May 28, 1838. Mrs. Rebecca Dixon, the wife of the founder of the City of Dixon, with her sister, asked the Rev. Thomas Powell, a Missionary of the American Baptist Home Missionary Society to be moderator of a meeting called to organize a Baptist Church to be called the First Baptist Church of Dixon and Buffalo Grove.

At first they met alternately in the schoolhouses of Dixon and Buffalo Grove until by mutual agreement it was decided to separate. All the members approving, the Dixon Church became a separate organization on April 16, 1842.

From 1842 to 1849 the members worshipped alternately with the brethren of the Methodist Church in their building until the new Baptist Meeting House was completed and dedicated on May 5, 1849. The records of the outstanding men and women connected with this organization are too numerous to mention.

Among them J. T. Little, John Moore, for a long time editor of the Telegraph, Professor E. C. Smith, for many years Superintendent of the Dixon Schools, and for forty years Superintendent of the Sunday School, Edward Truman Judge J. D. Crabtree, J. H. Todd, James Austin, and T. J. Miller, who is still with us, active and interested in the affairs of the Church.

Among the many splendid women, many have heard of Mrs. Sally Herrick, who rendered splendid service during the troublous days of the Civil War, also Mrs. Harry Chiverton and Mrs. Asa Judd.

Our Church has a great history and its traditions come to us as a sacred bequest. May we who are living be found worthy to rank with the men and women who were not afraid to face great odds and achieve in His name.

The longest pastorate in the history of the church was that of Rev. J. H. Pratt during whose ministry the present building was erected and dedicated in August, 1872.

The Rev. William H. Parker was pastor from 1883 to 1886. During this period the church grew and flourished in spiritual power and service, the membership being raised to 212.

The Rev. Hector C. Leland was pastor from 1892 to 1899. During this time a new parsonage was purchased, and one hundred and sixty names were added to the membership.

The Rev. Wm. C. Spencer is still affectionately remembered by many. He was pastor from 1899 to 1904. During the ministry of Rev. Rolox Harlan, Ph. D. (1907 to 1909) a new pipe organ was installed at a cost of $2,000.

The present pastor of the First Baptist Church is the Reverend Walter W. Marshall.

GOOD THOUGHTS

Men will be conscious of the divine presence will see God when through purification they have sanctified themselves. Giving up all that is material in our thinking, laying off false concepts of God, purifying our affections, learning to love only the good and true, these are the steps to be taken in the way of spiritual progress.

Christian Science Monitor
After all, in spite of the vulgar materialism of our day, we do feel that the spiritual side of life is the most important, and brings the only joy.

No man or woman of the humblest sort can really be strong, gentle, pure and good, without the world being the better for it, without somebody being helped and comforted by the very existence of that goodness.

Nothing can make a man truly great but being truly good and partaking of God's holiness.
Matthew Henry

The wisdom that is from above is first pure, then peaceable, gentle and easy to be intreated, full of mercy and good fruits, without partiality, and without hypocrisy. And the fruit of righteousness is sown in the peace of them that make peace. James

The Junior Church services last Sunday morning was inspirational and helpful. Four members of the Primary Juniors gave the morning prayer; a large number gave memory verses from the scripture lesson. The pastor spoke briefly on "Keeping Our Lives Right Side Out." Gertrude Fell gave a fine setting of beautiful things concerning religion. This is a regular feature on the first Sunday morning of each month.

The mid week service next week on Wednesday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Thompson. We are sure to have a good time and all who love the Word are invited to fellowship on this mid week hour. The rest of the week will go much better for it.

There was no mid week service this week on account of the joint meeting of the W. E. M. S. and Standard Bearer societies. One of those fine scramble suppers were enjoyed at 6:30 followed by a joint program which was very finely put on. Over $20 found its way to the two offerings—the Incense Offering and the Mothers' Memorial offering.

St. Paul's Lutheran

St. Paul's Evangelical Lutheran church began in a barn, August 20, 1848. It was John N. Burkett's barn, located about 2 miles east of Dixon on the road that is now known as the Lincoln Highway. Rev. Jacob Neff Burkett was the first pastor and served a few months more than two years. It was not long until the Congregation moved to other quarters—the Gravel School house on a corner of the Burkett farm. The congregation was originally known as "The First Evangelical Lutheran Congregation of Lee County, Illinois." It was in the Gravel Schoolhouse at a meeting, Nov. 12, 1853 that the name was changed to St. Paul's Evangelical Lutheran Church of Lee County and State of Illinois.

The congregation began to build its first edifice in Dixon on Crawford avenue between Third and Fourth streets, on the west side of the avenue, in the summer of 1854. It was during the pastorate of the veteran pastor, Rev. William Uhl, that this beginning was made.

It was during the pastorate of Rev. Abraham A. Primmer the congregation purchased the lots on Second street and Hennepin avenue and built the present church in 1868, to which numerous additions have been made during the years. As it stood originally, "it was a neat brick structure, 42 x 80 feet, two stories high, with the auditorium above as now."

The congregation has enjoyed a regular and ever-increasing growth during its 89 years of history. The names of godly, faithful, and brilliant pastors adorn its records. By the side of these pastors there was a noble array of godly and faithful members, men and women; some of whom remain until this day. Others have labored, and some have entered into their labors. Others have sown and we are reaping. During the present pastorate of over eight years there has been an average yearly gathering of about 80 members. The congregation at present supports two pastors, the pastor on the home field, and Rev. Carl B. Caughman on the foreign field, located at Satemappali, Guntur district, India. All this is possible by the faithful, earnest cooperation of every member. The congregation might well be characterized as a church of loyal people. Any that have no church home are invited to journey with us.

9:30 A. M.—Bible school. A place for everybody, babies on the Cradle roll, tiny tots in the Beginners' class; children in Primary; boys and girls in the Junior; and classes for young people and adults to suit all tastes and ages.

10:45 A. M.—Divine worship. Sermon—"How Are Men Made Perfect?" The regular choir sings. Though we are inviting those out of the city and community who prefer our church, to worship with us there will be nothing more than the regular worship for the occasion. We always plan to feed the soul and comfort and inspire the worshippers.

6:30 P. M.—Luther League. Topic—"What Are the Real Values of Church Membership?" Leaders: Wilbur Fuels and Frank Hahn. Many young people are missing the joy and strength of their lives because they do not fellowship with Christian friends and with the Great Friend—Jesus Christ. You

Prominent Banker of New York Completes Industrial Study

New York, March 16.—The present lull in business with consequent unemployment is a temporary spotty condition incident to readjustment in our industrial organization and will not affect the fundamental prosperity of the country, according to Paul M. Mazur, economist and partner of Lehman Brothers, bankers, who has just completed a comprehensive economic study. The results will be published tomorrow by the Viking Press under the title of "American Prosperity: Its Causes and Consequences."

"Although President Coolidge's administration has undoubtedly contributed to the kind of confidence that makes for good business," neither party politics nor uncertainty about the coming presidential election has had any material effect on business conditions, Mr. Mazur finds, and attributes our unprecedented prosperity, which he believes will continue indefinitely, to the high pressure forces of selling which this country has developed in order to dispose of the ever-growing output of low-cost mass production.

Create Demand
"Refuting the basic economic law of supply and demand, the modern American business man has evolved means to create demand that will consume available supply," Mr. Mazur states. "Desire has superseded need as the dominant factor in the buying habits of the consuming public, and modern business has learned how to create desire through high-style selling, advertising, changing styles and other distribution agencies, so that there is virtually a never-ending market for the products of American industry, and therefore what amounts to a condition of continuing prosperity."

"Need or wear and tear made replacement too slow for the needs of American industry, so the high-pressures of business found a new god to take its place and its name is style, or technically 'obsolescence,' meaning out of date. It can be created as rapidly as the creative power of inventive minds determine, and it removes saturation beyond the stars. As with dresses, women's footwear changes day by day; high plain black shoes have become as rare as museum articles. Furniture changes with dizzy speed from Louis Quatorze to Early American, and then to a new modern note. Beds alter from unsanitary wooden to sanitary iron and brass, and then from cold metal back to warm and colorful wooden. Dishpans and cooking utensils change overnight to scientific aluminum containers that save fuel and preserve appetizing odors and valuable vitamins, and finally to the utility of a frying pan is added the desirability of a color scheme that harmonizes with an attractive kitchen."

"Although Henry Ford deserves credit for a mass production mechanism that has contributed largely to American well-being, and his new model A gives fresh evidence that his energy burns bright, it was his failure to recognize that Model T had passed out of style that was responsible for his poor results last year and in considerable part for present unemployment."

Obsolescence Element
The "obsolescence" or style factor is a fundamental element in the economics of modern industry and applies not merely to modern articles but to whole industries, Mr. Mazur observes, citing rayon, motion pictures and radio as recent inventions which have created entirely new needs and desires on the part of the public, outmoding other competitive products and depressing or stifling the industries back of them, and causing large-scale readjustments in business as well as in the mode of life. The banker predicts frequent inventive developments of similar importance and effect, and asserts the era of scientific industrial experimentation and progress has only begun.

Credit to Advertising
Advertising is given a large share of the credit for the prosperous conditions which Mr. Mazur believes will continue indefinitely, although he says of it that "it throws at the American buying public a continuous and terrific barrage of threats, fears, beauty, sparkle, persuasion and exaggeration." While admitting that exaggerated advertising has been subjected to much criticism and cannot go too far without reducing public confidence, Mr. Mazur asserts that American products and industry would be given a death-blow if advertising were limited to unadorned and unvarnished statement on the ground that it promotes sales which are the basis of present prosperity. The banker predicts the next development in advertising will be a "battle for consumers' loyalty" between manufacturers of branded articles and the retail element of business which is now organizing in chain stores.

Next to "obsolescence" and advertising, Mr. Mazur's survey reveals installment selling as one of the most important factors in American prosperity, and he accepts the minimum figure of five billion dollars as the annual amount which it has added thus far to the sum total of the nation's business. Contrasting the arguments of the automobile and radio manufacturer with the views of the social economist that a comfortably-riding and happily housed public is more inclined to develop into a happy and contented nation, than a public free from the worry of debt and financial pressure, Mr. Mazur claims only that installment purchasing has materially added to the business turn-over and has played a stellar role in the drama of American business. He explains, however, that it merely duplicates on an individual scale the practices of governments and corporations which borrow on the strength of their future receipts to provide their present needs.

The unfavorable element in the present economic situation is that the distribution forces of business have run sales costs up to a point where they off-set the gains from the lessening cost of increased mass production, and Mr. Mazur fears a period of "profitless prosperity" unless the readjustment now responsible for sporadic slackness is accomplished quickly, in time to avoid disaster.

Sees Giant Combines
In the readjusting trend away from over-standardization and toward greater flexibility that will enable mass production to meet the demand for constantly changing styles, Mr. Mazur foresees may giant combines and business consolidations, and heralds the era of the circular merger combining groups of businesses in similar branches of industry such as breakfast foods, wearing apparel, or automobiles as instances by General Motors. He draws the distinction between this class of combine, the horizontal merger of directly competing concerns, and the vertical merger uniting all branches of an industry in the production of a standardized product from the raw material to the finished stage. The latter type will be the victim of its own low-cost standardization in a period when the need is for flexibility, he says.

"Huge gold reserves in this country will inevitably tend to increase the price of securities and lower their yields, so that instead of five or six per cent dividends on common stocks and bonds, and ten to fifteen per cent on security earnings per share, the future will offer three or four per cent on prime investment securities, five to six per cent on preferred stocks and six to twelve per cent in earnings on common stock prices," Mr. Mazur forecasts. "The public will have to be satisfied with a lower return on capital in return for unprecedented national prosperity and wealth."

From the political standpoint, the banker foresees the crumbling of the tariff wall as one result of American wealth and prosperity, since an open trade door offers Europe the only means to overcome her growing indebtedness to this country. "During her post-war recovery Europe has drawn tremendously on American credit to purchase our goods and by increasing her debt to us has maintained our favorable trade balance. Only by exporting more goods to America than she imports from here, with due allowance for tourist expenditures, can Europe avoid insolvency. This means a serious threat to American industry in the domestic market," but Mr. Mazur admits that this development is too remote to disturb present American prosperity.

KELLOGG PLACES U. S. ON RECORD AS AGAINST WAR

Secretary of State in Peace Address in N. Y. Last Eve

New York, March 16.—(AP)—Placing the American government formally on record in favor of an unqualified anti-war treaty between the great powers of the world, Secretary Kellogg said in an address here last night that if the principal nations are united in a sincere desire for such a compact, a formula could be devised acceptable to all.

The Secretary spoke before the Council on Foreign Relations and took for his subject the war-prevention policy of the United States and the treaties and proposed treaties which had been advanced in favor of world peace.

He coupled his advocacy of an anti-war treaty with the emphatic statement that the American government "will not become a party to any agreement which directly or indirectly, expressly or by implication, is a military alliance."

People of One Mind.
Mr. Kellogg expressed the hope that the present negotiations with France which have as their object the conclusion of a general anti-war treaty would be successful ultimately. The common people of the world were of one mind, he believed, in their desire to see the abolition of war as an institution, and he pledged himself, both personally and officially, always to support and advocate the conclusion of appropriate treaties for arbitration, for conciliation, and for the renunciation of war.

"I must not claim," he said, "that treaties of arbitration and conciliation, or even treaties explicitly renouncing war as an instrument of national policy, afford a certain guaranty against those conflicts between nations which have periodically broken out since the dawn of history. In addition to treaties these must be an aroused public conscience against the utter horror and frightfulness of war. The peoples of the world must enjoy a peaceful mind, as it has been said, and treaties such as I have discussed, and the efforts of statesmen to advance the cause of world peace, can only be regarded as a portion of the problem. I am not so blind as to believe that the millennium has arrived, but I do believe that the world is making great strides toward the pacific adjustments of international disputes."

No Military Alliances.
Explaining that in the present treaty negotiations it was the purpose of the United States in so far as possible to eliminate war as a factor in international relations, Mr. Kellogg said the United States cannot obligate itself in advance to use its armed forces against any other nation of the world. The United States does not believe that the peace of the world or of Europe, depends upon or can be assured by treaties of military alliance, the utility of which as guarantors of peace is repeatedly demonstrated in the pages of history, he said.

The arbitration treaty with France, recently ratified by the Senate, as well as other treaties, were discussed at length by Mr. Kellogg, who said it was difficult for him to see by what claim a government could properly request arbitration of disputes covered by the four exceptions stipulated in the treaty, including the Monroe Doctrine, since few, if any, would present questions justifiable in their nature.

"I know of but one other form of treaty which can be concluded for the purpose of preventing war," continued Mr. Kellogg, "and that is a treaty in which the parties specifically find themselves not to resort to war. It is this kind of treaty which people have in mind when they discuss treaties for outlawing war, and it is a novel idea in modern international relations."

French Proposal.
Outlining the proposal of the French Premier, Aristide Briand, for a bilateral treaty which would condemn recourse to war and renounce it as an instrument of national policy, Mr. Kellogg said this important and inspiring proposal was carefully and sympathetically studied.

"While we might well have hesitated to take the initiative in proposing such a treaty to Europe," he continued, "the invitation from France afforded us an opportunity to examine anew the whole question of world peace and to determine in what practical manner we could best cooperate."

The Secretary told of his suggestion to France that the treaty be an equivalent multilateral treaty concluded among the principal powers, including, besides France and the United States, Great Britain, Germany, Italy and Japan. France has agreed in principle, he said, but suggested the treaty provide only for renunciation of wars of aggression, explaining that her obligations under the League of Nations and the League of Nations and the League of Nations presented certain difficulties.

"I have not been able to agree to that reservation," he said. "My objection to limiting the scope of the anti-war treaty to mere wars of aggression is based partly upon a very real disinclination to see the ideal of world peace qualified in any way, and partly upon the absence of any satisfactory definition of the word 'aggression' or the phrase 'wars of aggression.' It is difficult for me to see how a definition could be agreed upon which would not be open to abuse."

Y.M.C.A.

An unusual program featured the meeting of the Toastmasters' Club on Thursday evening and the meeting proved one of the most enjoyable of the season. Last week one of the fat men of the club addressed the members on the heavyweight's contribution to progress and happiness, and at the meeting this week B. S. Schildberg gave an instructive and entertaining talk on the lightweight's contribution to civilization. An old fashioned spelling bee between the heavyweights and the lightweights resulted in a victory for the heavies and the thin men were punished by having to sing. The parliamentary drill was in charge of A. G. Harris and proved most instructive.

Two of the members of the club arrived at the meeting early in order to act as a reception committee, only to find that all members of the club were present and acting in the same capacity, much to the amusement of all. James Cledon, recently returned from California, was again in his accustomed place and will no doubt address the club on his western trip next week.

FOUR PLANES FOR ATLANTIC FLIGHT MANNED IN PARIS

Pilots of All Plan to Attempt Jump This Summer

Le Bourget, France.—(AP)—France has vowed to conquer, before the summer is over, the hazardous westward route across the north Atlantic to the United States.

Four attempts are scheduled to be made before July 1 to fly from Le Bourget field, where Lindbergh landed, to Roosevelt field, New York. The Paris-New York flight has never been accomplished, but the French aviators who are preparing for this summer's effort are determined to show that the air lanes of the north Atlantic are not one way streets.

The foremost of the French trans-Atlantic projects is to be undertaken by Costes and LeBrix, the heroes of the south Atlantic last fall, across the Paris-Buenos Aires flight. They are now on the Pacific coast of the United States, bound for Paris by way of the orient.

Their effort is to be made soon after their return—perhaps as early as May—in a magnificent Breguet bi-plane with a single Hispano-Suiza motor of 650 horsepower. The ship is waiting for them at the Villacoublay airfield.

Maurice Drouhin, formerly pilot for Charles Levine and one of France's outstanding aviators, expects to take off from Le Bourget about June 1 in a Couzinet monoplane, equipped with three 180-horsepower Hispano-Suiza motors. Before his Atlantic attempt he will try a nonstop round trip between Paris and Dakar, Senegal, on the west African coast.

Lucien Bossoutrot, the pilot who was lost a week on the coast of Mauritania while attempting a non-stop Paris-Dakar flight in 1921, will try the Paris-New York flight in a Bleriot thick-wing monoplane with four 250-horsepower Hispano-Suiza motors. He hopes to get away not later than June 15. Bossoutrot's machine is the only one of the trans-Atlantic foursome that has already taken the air. He recently lifted 15,000 pounds of fuel over Villacoublay field.

The fourth flyer, France's mystery pilot whom some call the "Lone Falcon," is Detroya, who will fly alone in a baby plane called Avimeta, which is being built by an obscure manufacturer. The plane is propelled by a Wright Whirlwind motor of 220-horsepower, similar to the one Lindbergh had in the "Spirit of St. Louis". Detroya is keeping the date of his departure a secret.

Fletcher Tells on Himself and Taft

Washington.—(AP)—Henry P. Fletcher, United States ambassador to Italy, was once mistaken for a potter by President Taft.

Ambassador Fletcher related the anecdote while on a recent visit to Washington.

"When I was out in China as first secretary," he said, "Mr. Taft promoted me to be minister to Chile. I came to Washington on my way to my new post and called upon him to thank him for the promotion. We also had an informal visit.

"I went to Chile and came back two years later. There was a tremendous row on in politics in 1912 and everyone was at sixes and sevens. I was told to come to the White House at 11:30. That day the president was receiving a delegation of potters and the secretary to the president was very busy with potters and didn't tell the president who I was.

"It seems I was supposed to be a potter and after those other fellows went through—I remained. The president looked at me and wondered what I was standing around for. I didn't know I was taken for a potter and the president didn't know who or what I was so he turned to me and said, 'Well sir, where are you from?'

"I am from Santiago, Chile," I replied.

"He didn't know there were any potters in Chile so he said, 'How long have you been down there?'

"Two years."

"I wonder if you know my friend Mr. So-and-so down there?"

"Yes, I know him, and I don't know any man who has criticized more harshly the policy of the United States."

"The president replied, 'I am surprised to hear that he was a classmate of mine and a very decent fellow in college. By the way, what are you doing down there?'

"I replied, 'I am your minister.'"

"The president laughed until you could hear him out on Pennsylvania avenue and said, 'I thought you were a potter.'"

Quit Farm for R. R.

Ohlman, Ill.—(AP)—William J. Houck, one of Illinois' "Master Farmers," quit a farm to become a railroad section boss 25 years ago. Nine years of railroad work convinced him that his future was in the farm, so he moved back to the work he learned as a boy and in 16 years, he had been named one of the leading farmers of the state.

The recognition was conferred upon Houck by the Prairie Farmer, farm publication of Chicago.

When Houck started farming back in 1912, modern fertilizing methods had just been introduced to agriculturists. The use of limestone and tile was still the center of hot disputes among farmers as to fertility value.

Houck was certain, however, that the plan had merit, and to his farm-rented land, he hauled tons of limestone and more than 50,000 tile. "Wisecrackers" flung jibes at him constantly, wanting to know if he was "going to whitewash the land."

His early experiments proved his contention, and today his farm is regarded as one of the most fertile in the state. His system of farm management includes the growing of corn, oats, wheat, sweet clover, alfalfa and soybeans, and the handling of dairy cattle, market hogs and poultry.

Most of the crops raised are fed to livestock, with a quantity of wheat sold on the market yearly. He milks a herd of 13 purebred Holsteins, and a drove of spotted Poland China hogs produce 50 to 60 market pigs a year. A feature of his farm is a 250-bird flock of Buff Orpington poultry, highly rated by poultry breeders in Illinois.

The Foresters and their families are looking forward to a big time at their club room Saturday evening, it being St. Patrick's day. The speaker, Anton Halmaier, has prepared a debate team for an interesting argument. Following this will be some minstrel comedies and the affair will wind up with a dance with music by the Keilen Orchestra of Sublette.

Wednesday was a busy day when eight carloads of live stock was shipped from this point. The shippers were Frank and Walter Delhotel, Seymour Vickery, Albert Hoerner, Rudolph Heiden and Joseph Gehant. The majority of the shipment was feeding cattle that were shipped in last fall and fattened and because of the dollar trend of corn, the owners did not deem it advisable to hold them further.

The members of the local athletic association held their business meeting on Tuesday evening bringing the season to a close. Their last game had been played at Paw Paw the evening previous and unfortunately they lost it, closing the season with having lost just one game more than they won. Prof. J. P. Campbell deserves credit for having organized the team and furnishing equipment and the men made a remarkable showing considering the fact that many of them had never played the game before. They were reinforced by William Archer of Compton in all games with the exception of the ones against his home town. Bill proved a fighter and was always in the game. The line-up was as follows—J. P. Knauer, center; Dale Beemer, left guard; Charles Elliott, left forward; William Archer, right guard and Clarence Michel, right forward. Merle Pine and J. P. Campbell substituting. POISON IN BODY

Chicago, March 15.—(AP)—A complete report of the coroner's chemist was read today at the inquest of Mrs. Mary Alice Dickinson. The finding bore out the first announcement that the body of the wealthy 74-year-old widow contained sufficient poison to have caused death.

More than twelve grains of the poison were in the organs, said Dr. William D. McNally, the chemist, while the ordinary dose is five grains.

WATER GOLF

WANT A LIFT?

A great many times nowadays a HIKE ends up as a TOUR and that is exactly what today's puzzle does. Par is seven, but you may be able to beat it. One solution is on page 11.

THE RULES

1—The idea of letter golf is to change one word to another and do it in par, a given number of strokes. Thus to change COW to HEN in three strokes, COW, HOW, HEW, HEN.

2—You can change only one letter at a time.

3—You must have a complete word, of common usage, for each pump. Slang words and abbreviations don't count.

4—The order of letters cannot be changed.

One solution is printed on page 11.

COSTIGAN QUILTS TARIFF BOARD; ASSAILS CHIEF

Coolidge and His Fellow
Commissioners are Objects Attack

Washington, March 15.—(AP)—The long-smouldering fires of disagreement in the Tariff Commission were rekindled momentarily today with the sudden resignation of its oldest member, Commissioner Edward P. Costigan, of Denver, Colo., who simultaneously delivered an outspoken attack against three of his colleagues and President Coolidge.

The last of the original Woodrow Wilson appointees, Costigan terminated exactly eleven years on the Commission yesterday by tendering his resignation and taking a parting shot at the "high tariff" or "Marvin group" in the six-member body.

In a letter to Senator Robinson of Arkansas, Democratic floor leader who two years ago headed a committee investigation of the tariff body, the retiring Commissioner, long at loggerheads with the administration's tariff policies, assailed President Coolidge for failure to lower rates when the evidence clearly demanded it and charged the Executive had "helped to wreck the Commission's usefulness."

Assails Three Members
Chairman Thomas O. Marvin of Massachusetts and Commissioners Sherman J. Lowell of New York, and Edgar B. Brossard of Utah, were those against whom Costigan leveled his attack within the Commission.

Declaring they had been "reckless on occasions in their treatment of facts and the law," he said this group had consistently worked for higher rates and against important reductions and that the "manipulation of the Commission since 1922 is but a part of the total picture of present-day Washington in an era which history may yet summarize as the age of Daugherty, Fall and Sinclair."

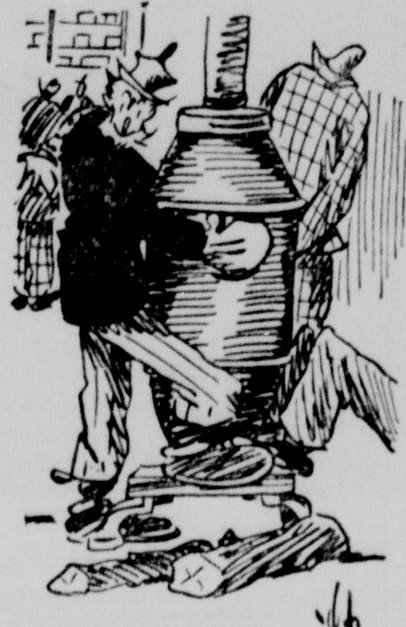

Marvin was pictured as a "tireless and fanatical protectionist, known in Washington as a tariff lobbyist for New England protected interests."

It was well known in Washington, the Colorado member said, that President Coolidge had "long ceased personally to consult or place confidence in his own designated tariff commission chairman."

Purported Order from Mine Owner

Washington, March 15.—(AP)—A memorandum purporting to be an order from the Pittsburgh Coal Company to its mine superintendents "to clean up all unsightly conditions" prior to the recent inspection of its mines by the Senate sub-committee was introduced in the Senate investigation of the bituminous industry today by Harry T. Brundidge, a reporter for the St. Louis Star.

Brundidge, who went through the mining territory recently for his paper, said he had paid $25 to a mine employee for the letter, which reads:

"To All Mine Superintendents:

"The U. S. Senate investigating committee is now visiting the Pittsburgh district. Clean up all unsightly conditions. Keep our police in the background. Avoid all arrests. Instruct our men to keep out of trouble. If the committee desires to question any of our employees, see to it that you present men you can trust and who can be depended upon to give the right kind of answers. If you are examined by the committee do not answer any questions you think might be harmful to our interests. The company will protect you. The company has mailed a spirited letter to each individual employee. If you know of any unsatisfactory condition in company camps or barracks, see that it is eliminated at once.

"The Pittsburgh Coal Company" The reporter would not vouch for the authenticity of the document, but said he had secured it only after an employee had told him that conditions had recently "been cleaned up." This was while the Senate sub-committee was in that section, said Brundidge, adding that he had informed Senators Gooding, republican of Idaho, and Wheeler, democrat of Montana, of the matter at the time.
